Breitling, manufacturer of the most beautiful in the world of wristwatches, was formed in 1884 by Leon Breitling, who founded the company at the age tender from 24 in Switzerland. Leon soon developed a reputation for producing technically excellent watches and, as his business expanded, the plant was transferred Barns and began specializing in chronographs.

The First World War marked the arrival of the aircraft real first, especially as a fighting machine. As the real takeoff of aviation, sorry for the pun, Breitling focused on field of aviation timekeeping, and has proved a good move. During the Second World War broke new ground again, introducing the famous "Chronomat" clock, which was the first in the world to be equipped with a circular slide ruler for easy navigation. With a reputation as a Premium aviator watch, Breitling has quickly become the de facto choice of pilots worldwide. This reputation was cemented when the owners of companies Air and Pilots Association Chronomat call that his official watch. The ultimate success of the Breitling held in 1962, when astronaut Scott Carpenter was one of his clocks in space - this show was known as the cosmonaut "and is coveted Watch today

The 1970s saw the surprise bag Breitling somewhat less expensive quartz watches more precise took the world by storm. They had fight against a rising tide of competition, notably from Japan and the Far East, with brands such as Seiko to make a lot of business. This proved early 1980s, however, Ernest Schneider, who has managed to brand awareness using its expertise in aviation and models are relatively large in fact sought to become a great asset. Mechanical watches such as Breitling wristwatches, soon transformed mode. At the end of 1980, the Breitling wristwatch, his case was deliberately broad bevel status symbol recognizable around the world, and became soon copied by many competitors.

Breitling wrist watches are the first choice of most current drivers and commercial professionals and new models like the Breitling Emergency, which sends a signal reduction of the radio, if the user is lost, continue to keep the brand at the forefront of technology and style.
